DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election without traverse of Group I, claims 1-7, in Paper No. 7 is acknowledged.

Priority

2. Acknowledgment is made of applicant's claim for foreign priority based on an application filed in Germany on February 24, 1999. It is noted, however, that applicant has not filed a certified copy of the Germany application 199 07 940.4 as required by 35 U.S.C. 119(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

- 3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:
 The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
- 4. Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 7 recites "the plastic coating is printed" which is unclear and renders the claim vague and indefinite. It is unclear from the claim language and the specification whether Applicant is claiming that the plastic coating has printing on it or if Applicant the method of the plastic coating printed on the carrier. In view of claim 1 and the carrier is "printable," for purposes of examination it is consider to be the method of the plastic coating printed on the carrier.

Examiner's Comment

5. The term "laser-active pigments" in claims 1 and 5 is not found to be indefinite.

However, Applicant has not given specific examples or guidelines in the specifications of the types of pigments that constitute "laser-active." Therefore, the term "laser-active" is given it's broadest reasonable interpretation from the Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary 10th Ed. A laser is defined as a device that utilizes the natural oscillations of atoms or molecules between energy levels for generating coherent electromagnetic radiation usually in the ultraviolet, visible or infrared regions of the spectrum. Therefore, a "laser-active pigment" is taken to be any pigment that has an action with radiation in the ultraviolet, visible or infrared regions of the spectrum.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

6. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

7. Claims 1-5 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hardwick et al. (WO 98/56596).

Art Unit: 1772

Hardwick discloses a multi-layer security product comprising a substrate made of at least one biaxially oriented polymeric film (plastic carrier material) which is coated on both sides with an opacifying pigmentary coating (plastic coating and covering film containing a laser-active pigment) comprising a major proportion of pigment in a minor proportion of a cross-linked polymeric binder. See page 10, lines 1-8. The opacifying pigments block the passage of a specific wavelength, visible light radiation, thus it constitutes a laser-active pigment. The security product further comprises a security feature such as a watermark (page 10 line 25). Furthermore, various indicia maybe formed on at least on the first and second opposing surfaces of the substrate, such as drawings, writing and other designs well known to all users of banknotes (page 9, line 20-22).

The term "printable" in claim 1 is taken to be equivalent to "capable of." It has been held that the recitation that an element is "capable of" performing a function is not a positive limitation but only requires the ability to so perform. Since, the biaxially oriented polymeric film of the substrate is able to receive colored layer and various indicia maybe formed on the substrate it is printable.

The method of forming the product is not germane to the issue of patentability of the product itself. Further, when the prior art discloses a product which reasonably appears to be either identical with or only slightly different than a product claim in a product-by-process claim, the burden is on the Applicant to present evidence from which the Examiner could reasonably conclude that the claimed product differs in kind from those of the prior art. In re Brown, 459 F.2d 531, 173 USPO 685 (CCPA 1972); In re Fessman, 489 F.2d 742, 180 USPO 324 (CCPA 1974). This burden is NOT discharged solely because the product was derived from a process not known to the prior art. In re Fessman, 489 F.2d 742, 180 USPQ 324 (CCPA 1974).

Furthermore, the determination of patentability for a product-by-process claim is based on the product itself and not on the method of production. If the product in the product-by-process claim is the same or obvious from a product of the prior art, the claim is unpatentable even though the prior product was made by a different process. In re Thorpe, 227 USPQ 946, 966 (Fed. Cir. 1985) and MPEP §2113. In this case, the limitation "extruded onto the carrier" in claim 1 and "plastic coating is printed" is a method of production and therefore does not determine the patentability of the product itself.

8. Claims 1, 2, 4, 6 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Merkle et al. (5,298,922).

Merkle discloses a security identity card comprising a base layer (printable carrier material), a second color layer provided with pigments that absorbs laser light (plastic coating with laser –active pigments of a specific wavelength), a first color layer (cover film) substantially permeable to laser light (col. 6, lines 14-19 and figure 2). The color layers may be dyed plastic films (col. 2, lines 22-36). The card may further comprise a printed security pattern such as a guilloche (security features) pattern (col. 2, lines 22-36). From figure 6 it can be seen that the second color layer has embossing.

The term "printable" in claim 1 is taken to be equivalent to "capable of." It has been held that the recitation that an element is "capable of" performing a function is not a positive limitation but only requires the ability to so perform. Since, the data carrier color layer may be screen printed on the base (col. 2, lines 22-24) it is printable.

The term "such as" is taken to be optional language. In the instant case in claim 4 the limitation "such as watermarks and/or mottled fibers on the carrier material is taken to optional examples of the security features. Furthermore, the limitations of this claim are meet with any additional security feature.

The method of forming the product is not germane to the issue of patentability of the product itself. Further, when the prior art discloses a product which reasonably appears to be either identical with or only slightly different than a product claim in a product-by-process claim, the burden is on the Applicant to present evidence from which the Examiner could reasonably conclude that the claimed product differs in kind from those of the prior art. In re Brown, 459 F.2d 531, 173 USPQ 685 (CCPA 1972); In re Fessman, 489 F.2d 742, 180 USPQ 324 (CCPA 1974).
